April 24, 2003 LB 759

revenue side, Senator Brashear's bill is a part of the package. Senator Brashear didn't intend it as part of the package. He intended it as an independent tax reform piece, and so it has to be seen primarily in that light. But no less importantly, the revenues from that tax reform piece, albeit it wasn't Senator Brashear's motivation, is one of the two important packages that we need to consider, which taken together should offer you, should offer you, in order to parallel the Appropriations Committee recommendation, together, taken together, $360 million in revenues. Okay, what's in the Brashear package right now? Right now, as it's started out, and we're speaking in rough numbers here, because we've made a number of changes that nobody can calculate in short order exactly what they are. But roughly speaking, when we started on the Brashear bill, there was 180 to 185 million dollars of revenue in that package. Through the series of amendments that we have gone through already, as best anybody can tell, we're down to 160 or 150 million, depending on how all these series of amendments that have been adopted, what effect they have. But you remember, we took out snack food with flour. That probably reduces by half that particular expansion. We took out the addition of rooms and floors and a whole bunch of items relating to construction that will reduce the amount of tax income from the construction portion of the sales tax expansion. So if we're down to $150 million, and we take out the rest of food, we're down to 140, 135-140 million in the Brashear package. Now you're saying, well, what's the other package to get up to $360 million? Well, the Revenue Committee...

SPEAKER BROMM: One minute.

SENATOR BEUTLER: ...is waiting...I invite Senator Landis to discuss...to see the results of this debate, for one thing at least. And they're going to come out with a second revenue package. You know, one of the likely items on that package is probably the expansion of the sales tax for either a permanent or another temporary period of time. The extension of the sales tax. That generates $180 million, if you just had that item in the second Revenue package, in the Revenue Committee package. That's roughly about half of the 360 we need. So we need to keep this bill at somewhere up to 150, in that neighborhood,
