it, but can you tell me exactly what happens when somebody in, say, Crofton, Nebraska has a South Dakota registered car, but they actually are a...they live in Crofton, Nebraska? What would happen when somebody complains about that scenario?

SENATOR SMITH: Under current law?

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM: Under your law, how will it work exactly?

SENATOR SMITH: If someone complains about it, they'd have to complain to law enforcement, and law enforcement would need to handle it. What I am proposing is that they would face the fines without a ten-day waiver.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM: But how do they...how is it they document the...that they are a Crofton resident?

SENATOR SMITH: If you look on page 1 of AM2222, at the bottom, the last three lines, those are the conditions that would lead to the mandatory...or would lead to the designation of needing to pay for a Nebraska auto registration.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM: Okay. Thank you, Senator Smith. If you care to have the rest of my time, you can.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Cunningham. Senator Chambers. And this will be your third time, as you know, Senator.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: I'm aware. Mr. President, members of the Legislature, I'm not going to whipsaw Senator Smith anymore. And I didn't feel that's what I was doing before. But I'm trying to illustrate a point, and the best way to do it is when we're dealing with legislation, and that's our job. When we clutter up the constitution, we develop the notion that it is a casual document that we can do anything we choose with it. But at times like this, there can be an underlining of the protection that the constitution provides. A state constitution can provide a greater amount of protection for people than is found in the U.S. Constitution. But what the U.S. Constitution does, which is a protection, is that it prevents states from
