February 12, 2004 LB 227

another standard of quality. When I send my kid out of Lincoln to do detasseling, I'm not going to have to do research on whether that organizer has a vehicle with child restraints or whether he or she is throwing them into the back of a pickup. I'm going to know, and that's one more investigation I don't have to do. That's one more telephone conversation I don't have to make. I can count on it. And the same is true when I send my kid down the street to go to the ice cream store with the neighbor boy. I know they are not going to ride in the back of a pickup truck. I can count on it. It improves my life. It improves the safety of the children. If this were a great hardship, that would be another question, but it's not a great hardship. It's a matter of a minor adjustment bringing us into conformance with the technology in terms of vehicles, bringing us, requiring us to use the technology that we already have and many, many people already use. I hope you see fit to adopt the amendment. And,...
