FLOOR DEBATE

March 10, 2004 LB 599

SENATOR JENSEN: Statute would.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...the ones who would say, I can find a way to give you a structure that is not limited to this square footage, and then everybody who wanted to circumvent would come to that person.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Mr. President.

SENATOR CUDABACK: It was Senator Jensen's time, Senator.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Oh. Well, thank you anyway.

SENATOR CUDABACK: That's fine, Senator Chambers. Thank you, Senator Jensen. Thank everybody, I guess. Senator Tyson, you're recognized.

SENATOR TYSON: Thank you, Mr. President, members of the body. Senator Chambers asked me what's the purpose of this bill. I gave Senator Chambers and Senator Jensen a copy of a letter from the Nebraskaland Conference of Building Officials and Inspectors, and I just want to read a portion of it, because I don't think...I don't think that Senator Chambers fully understands that there is a whole world out there not constructed on his hypotheticals. A couple of years ago I wanted to build a very small workshop in the back of my land, back of a piece of property in Norfolk. I had to bring a full set of plans, with grades, down to the permits and inspection division, and they had to approve them before I could turn a spade. The building was 14 by 16 foot. Everything that goes up in any kind of a town in Nebraska, anything that is built by a contractor in Nebraska, is subject to codes--electrical code, plumbing code, building codes. And you have to have...I don't know of a county in Nebraska, there may be one, that don't have a planning, permits and inspections organization in the county. All of this is regulated. Now what this bill is after, through the process of...I'm quoting from this letter: Through the process of negotiated rule making, building officials, the construction industry, architects, engineers, and any other
