March 18, 2004 LB 1083, 1089, 1093

had earlier this morning for those of you that were unable to attend the briefing. So some of this is going to be repetitive to some of you but I feel I have to start kind of from the beginning to help you understand the concept of the budget this year. First of all, if you look at your agenda this morning, budget and budget related bills, it's a little bit unusual, especially for a 60-day session, to have so many issues on the table and some of the decisions we're going to have to make because typically these would only be a few deficit bills. But this year, because of the forecast that came out February 27, which we...it made adjustments that we hadn't planned on being quite so severe in terms of revenue loss and some other things, there is going to be a little more intensive scrutiny this year of what we've had to do and I realize that. First of all, I want to say that we balanced to that forecast that came February 27. We took that into account and so we have not ignored it. We have not discounted it. We have taken that and worked through on the budget. The other thing I want to call to your attention particularly is the agenda this morning, if you will notice, there is ten bills starting with LB 1089, ending up with LB 1093, and some other bills in between, that are all a part of the package. And it's a little bit unique this year in the fact that the committee feels that we need all of these bills as part of our building block, if you will, to put this budget together. Some of these bills can be freestanding but many of them are necessary to make the whole package come together. And so as we go through that, I'll try to call your attention to the fact of the impact that they'll have and how they impact the total budget. That has to do with cash transfers. It has to do with some of the other bills that we're doing. One of the bills that's not on here but it got up here on its own yesterday was LB 1083. We have some money in LB 1083 that impacts out into the future. I should remind you also that we're in a little bit unique position in the fact that your A bills always are going to show two years out. But the fact of the matter is the budget is a two-year process. We're in the second year of that process and so next year, a lot of these appropriations will be subject to appropriations again or re...you might say reauthorization. So the second year of an A bill in many ways is just an estimate of what will happen in the out years per our statutes. But the fact of the matter is
