FLOOR DEBATE

March 30, 2004 LB 1089

Camp. It's just...it's just something I put out here that members can take a look at and, in good conscience, vote one way or the other.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Thank you for my time, Senator Synowiecki.
(Laughter)

SPEAKER BROMM: Thank you, Senator Wehrbein and Senator Synowiecki. Senator Engel.

SENATOR ENGEL: Mr. Speaker and members of the body, I recall this particular Work Ethic Camp from several years of getting it through the body here, as far as when it was created a few years ago, and it took quite a...I think it took about three years to get this started and as refined as we did it. I believed in it then and I believe in it now. And last year, they cut the funding for this camp and they're going to close it, and we come back and, after people...a few people were convinced it should go back in effect, it was put back last year. The funding was put back in there. So it is up and going and is very viable. The judges and the courts are using it now, and it is, like you've heard before, it's a little above capacity. And it...I think different from your intense supervision, community-based supervision, in the camp they are there 24 hours a day except when they're out on jobs. They are taught how to work. And I don't know how for the...I like the difference in costs from $1,000 or $1,200 a month to $152 or whatever a month, but I don't know how this parole officer can spend the necessary time with every individual at that price, to teach him all the things that need to be taught. I know they're required to go to work, they're required to go for counseling like they are in the Work Ethic Camp, and...but in the Work Ethic Camp they're required to work on their GEDs, and they are required to take drug counseling and so forth because most of them are in there are because they do have a drug or alcohol abuse problem. Does...I don't think you can compare the two, and the thing is these people on the work camp, from my understanding, that they would be going directly to prison if it wasn't for this work camp. They would not be put out on parole, community-based or otherwise. So these folks are a little more serious offenders than what they're putting out on the streets. Another thing is
