April 1, 2004

bam, you're around the corner and you're down in the ditch and what happened? Well, you know what happened. You overreacted. I'm not sure we need to overreact here. You know, good times are ahead. You know, the Forecasting Board, they were pretty...they were kind of pessimistic. They had...must a not had a good night's sleep the night before because they were pretty pessimistic. I mean they didn't sleep in a Holiday Inn Express, or whatever the term goes, but they...they were pretty pessimistic. I'm not that pessimistic. I think it's going to be kind of like gray hair. One morning you just wake up and it's there. You know, the money is going to be there. Just going to wake up some morning and it's going to be there. The money is coming in. Times dictate that. Eleven times since World War II this has happened. Bad times aren't ahead all the...for the next 20 years or whatever. We're going to have dollars to pay this off. Why try to go into debt? I mean, Senator Brashear has done a lot of work on this, he really has. Got to hand it to him, he really, really put a lot of thought and a lot of work. You can tell that. But I'm just not one to borrow money. I'm not one to have to pay interest unless you have to. If you have to pay the interest, then you got to...you got to pay the principal, then you're going to have to charge the people. I don't have any children, but you're going to have to charge; your children are going to be paying the interest. Why would you want to do that? If you're going to do this, just stick it on the income tax and you'll save all that interest. I don't get it. I really don't get it. If you have to pay it, just...we have the means, just put it on the income tax, pay it all at once, get it over with. Why string it out? I just...I can't get that through my head. Why do that? Why you want to pay the extra dollars when we have the revenue source there available? Just pay it and forget it. We're going to pay $100 million. We can use that for some other program. God knows we have enough of them out there that want to be funded. I guess maybe I'm being too simple here, but don't...let's don't overreact. I'll tell you one last thing. I know you're all listening, wanting to hear this. You just can't wait to hear it. But the people aren't stupid that are listening and watching and trying to understand this. We've come back for special session for a lot worse things. Think about that. We've come back to special session for a lot worse things than a
