FLOOR DEBATE

January 25, 2005 LB 20

SENATOR SCHROCK: Senator Chambers, I believe most pork producers in this state mark their swine. And I'll be honest with you, we haven't had swine on our farm since the fifties. But they either mark their swine or they notch their ears so there's an apparent...there's...from observing the wild critter, if you can get that good a look at it, you can tell whether it's from a domestic herd or not.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But there are...

SENATOR SCHROCK: And if it's from a...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...there are some free-roaming swine which don't look the wild one. Otherwise, we don't need this definition, because we will...everything that we see that looks wild is all that we're dealing with. So this part of the definition broadens it and takes it away from just physical appearance or even being a night creature. But since my time is probably up, I'll turn my light on and I will stop at this point. Thank you, Mr. President.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Schrock, on the Loudon amendment.

SENATOR SCHROCK: Senator, Mr. President, Legislature, you never know how long a bill is going to take. I appreciate the concern about this issue. I will oppose Senator Loudon's amendment, but I will tell you this. We do have a definition that is agreeable with the agricultural industry in this state and agreeable to Game and Parks, and I will read it. The definition of a feral swine is a swine whose reversion from the domesticated state to a stable condition more or less resembling the wild is apparent or an otherwise freely roaming swine having no visible tags, markings, or characteristics indicating that it is from a domestic herd, and reasonable inquiry within the area does not identify an owner. And that's why it's important that we don't have the public out there trying to identify what is a free-roaming swine or a feral swine. Let the Game and Parks do it. So we don't want people out there just shooting them, because then it becomes a sport. Most producers nowadays don't have hogs escape very often. If they do, they're very much
