about controls what the law talks about.

SENATOR BURLING: Yeah.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: That's logical. If the law doesn't specify how many it takes to have a quorum, then two people who show up can carry out the work of the commission without violating this law. Couldn't they?

SENATOR BURLING: Well, I don't think so, but if you do, I...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Is there anything in the law that says two people cannot carry out the work of the commission?

SENATOR BURLING: Not in here, but...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Is there anything in the law that says at least nine people must agree before a position can be taken by the commission?

SENATOR BURLING: Not in this paper.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Suppose...

SENATOR BURLING: The commission could decide that.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Suppose what I'm talking about happens. Would you then feel that this whole thing is a waste of time?

SENATOR BURLING: Well, it wouldn't be very credible, if what you said happened. We...you know, I don't think the body would consider it credible at all if that happened.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. Now let's go to some of the work of the commission. Suppose they sit around and they talk and they dispute and they listen to testimony from people who may appear before the commission, and they come to the conclusion that poor people who must pay a sales tax are taxed unfairly because practically everything they spend is subject to the sales tax. They don't have this discretionary or extra income that's not going to be hit by the sales tax. Wealthier people have to pay
