receive also. Is that true?

SENATOR BURLING: I would assume so.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay now, here's an escape clause in your bill. On page 2, beginning in line 8 (sic): "The Tax Policy"--it would say Reform--"Commission shall elect a chairperson from among its members. The commission shall meet quarterly or more often if the chairperson determines additional meetings are necessary to accomplish the objectives established in this act"--then here's the escape clause--"giving consideration to the funds appropriated." If the contract entered into with the facilitator eats up a considerable amount of that money, then there are not going to be as many meetings that can be called; isn't that true?

SENATOR BURLING: That's...yes. They're going to have to budget their money, to go the furthest that they can make it go.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Are you willing to set a maximum amount that the facilitator can be paid?

SENATOR BURLING: The commission is charged to do that.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Now this is going to...this commission will be in operation until when?

SENATOR BURLING: November of '07.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Right. So the facilitator is going to be paid more than for a year, correct, because this has the emergency clause? If this bill should pass this session, we'll be out of here sometime in April, probably. April is the fourth month, so there will be 8 months, plus 11, to get you to November. That would be 19 months. How much do you think this facilitator is going to insist on, if he or she has an expertise in this area?

SENATOR BURLING: I do not know.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But it could be a sizeable chunk of that
