FLOOR DEBATE

January 20, 2006 LB 72

you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT SHEEHY: Thank you, Senator Chambers. (Visitors introduced.) Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Mr. President. Notice that I'm not trying to remove, at this point, anything from the bill. But after some of these types of amendments which I think can be accepted, I'm going to make those motions to strike sections and see if, indeed, everything here is needed. The first thing I want to do, by way of the amendment that I'm offering, is to put this subsection (3) into the shape it ought to be in; namely, requiring these minimum standards. Then, when we reach the point where I'm going to try to strike it, or make a motion to strike it, we can discuss, if anybody is interested, whether we believe that all of these things are essential to being a successful security guard when you consider, from the beginning part of the bill, what it is that security guards are supposed to do. Cab drivers don't have to know all of these kinds of things, but we know they are not protecting persons and property. But I don't know that somebody protecting person and property would need to have all of these things under his or her umbrella of knowledge in order to function as a security guard. Before I ask Senator Stuhr any more questions, I have another little bitty amendment that I'm going to offer. One of them was going to deal with those fees, but Senator Beutler is looking at that. What I had wanted to do was say that when it comes to cost and they're trying to recoup the costs of whatever the administration of this act would entail, something that would say "actual cost" or "the cost shall not exceed" or "the fee shall not exceed the actual cost of providing" whatever the service is, because I don't want the Secretary of State to see this as a moneymaker for his office. And I'm still not convinced that the Secretary of State's Office is the place where some of these things ought to be. It's not unheard of to require a person to go to more than one office to carry out a transaction. As a matter of fact, when I filed for reelection, or when you file for election in the first place, there are certain papers you fill out in the county of your residence; then you trot all that stuff down to the Secretary of State's Office. So there are processes which require a person to be in
