FLOOR DEBATE

February 27, 2006

SENATOR JENSEN: I guess because of public acceptance of the previous two (sic).

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And he...do you think he felt that by saying he was from some Baptist Institute, during these times of religious fervor, pretended religious fervor, that might get him a leg up on others who may have come from a secular background?

SENATOR JENSEN: I don't know what his motive for doing that was, but...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But he did lie, didn't he?

SENATOR JENSEN: That's what I understand.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And they said, buddy, you got to go, and he went, right?

SENATOR JENSEN: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do you think we ought to have a little question mark in the back of our mind, if not outright skepticism, when somebody comes and has his or her religion precede him or her? Should that perhaps raise a red flag?

SENATOR JENSEN: I don't think it should...well,...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: What does being a Baptist have to do with working for RadioShack?

SENATOR JENSEN: (Laugh)

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Since he was going to lie, why did he choose to lie and mention some religious institution?

SENATOR JENSEN: I don't know. I suppose only he could answer that. To me,...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But he obviously thought that since he was going to lie that it would be better to lie and say he was religious, or give the impression he was, than to not do so. If
