Transcriber's Office
FLOOR DEBATE

February 27, 2006

somebody who is of a different sexual orientation and did not let that prevent the Governor from making an appointment. But here's the question that I'm asking: In this society, a person who has many sexual partners of the opposite sex is less condemned than a person who has one sex partner of the same sex. Isn't that true?

SENATOR JENSEN: Yes, it is.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: All right.

SENATOR JENSEN: I don't feel that way.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: There's no law against a person having as many sexual partners of the opposite sex as he or she wants. Isn't that true?

SENATOR JENSEN: That is correct.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And I can be married and still have other sexual partners and not be violating the law; isn't that true?

SENATOR JENSEN: Well, where does adultery come into that?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: The Old Testament. I'm talking about the civil law.

SENATOR JENSEN: Okay.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay. So I could have as many sexual partners as I could persuade to have sex with me, even if I'm married; isn't that true?

SENATOR JENSEN: Unfortunately, it is true.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Why is it unfortunate? It's not unfortunate for me.

SENATOR JENSEN: Well, I think it's unfortunate for them.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: For whom?
