FLOOR DEBATE

March 23, 2006 LB 1086

SENATOR CUDABACK: Senator Chambers, about 30 seconds.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: For my opening?

SENATOR CUDABACK: Eight minutes, I'm sorry.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, (laugh) Mr. President. I know time flies when you're having fun, and with all due respect to Senator Stuhr, I wasn't having that much fun. (Laugh) But anyway, what I have done, first of all, in the definitional section of the bill, is to define the word "actor" as a person who solicits, procures, or supervises the services or labor of another person. "Services" is defined in the bill, and you can find it. "Labor" is defined in the bill. The reason I used the word "actor" is so that throughout the bill, where we're talking about what ordinarily would be referred to as a perpetrator, we have the same term which has been defined, and it will recur throughout the bill. In line 9 on page 1 is the term "financial harm." That is defined as theft by extortion, as described in an existing section of statute. This replaces the attempt in the original offering to deal with the concept of blackmail. If you look up the definition of extortion, it talks about the pressures that somebody might bring to bear on an individual, to compel him or her to do something or refrain from doing something which that person has a right to do. But if that person is going to do that which is legal or refrain from doing that which is legal, only because he or she has been threatened with some of the things that are found in this referenced statute, that would be illegal. It is already, but it's being done here in connection with this trafficking of human beings. The original offering talked about inflicting serious harm on a person, so I took the definition of "serious personal injury" that already exists, because that includes psychological trauma as well as physical injury, and it was easier and cleaner to do it in that fashion. If you glance at other parts of the amendment, the definitional section, you can understand that for yourself, but I want to touch on the changes. In line 6 on page 2 is the definition of "minor," which simply means a person younger than 18 years of age. In view of the fact that there is a subsection in the bill that addresses minors specifically, I
