making one-time money available to law enforcement in this state. They have caps they have to deal with. They have increased law enforcement needs across our state that they have to deal with. And in my drug task force, the money that we get from these federal funds pays for three state patrolmen that serve Platte County, Madison County, Stanton County, a number of other northeast Nebraska counties. These are State Patrol officers that are funded through our Byrne funding in the SNARE task force. And the idea is to bring the law enforcement together under one roof for the common cause of making law enforcement contacts and arrests with people using drugs in northeast Nebraska. And what we do in the SNARE drug task force is not unique. It's done across the state. And if you don't want to pay for it now, then when you go back to your district, I hope you stick your hand high in the air and say, yep, I passed on funding that because I felt it was a federal government gift to the local departments, and I wasn't interested in finding a solution; I simply wanted to make sure we didn't continue that federal spending that we'd been doing, like we do with drug courts. Drug courts receive planning grants. Hall County drug court received a planning grant. The planning grant runs out this year for funding drug courts, which I think is the right thing to do. But I'll tell you what, you won't have anybody in drug court if nobody gets arrested. You won't have anybody getting treatment if nobody gets arrested. You won't have anybody to try and change their life if there's nobody that's charged with possession or sale or manufacture of methamphetamine or crank or cocaine or whatever it may be. This is where the rubber meets the road. And if we want to do something about the meth problem, I honestly...I walked on the floor today, I didn't think we have a problem with this. I thought that...and it shows my inexperience. It shows...you know, I thought we'd walk in here, everybody would say, yeah, we've got to start providing treatment opportunities, we've got to do education. But you know what? We can't turn our backs on the law enforcement effort. That's the one of three components that's absolutely necessary to the equation. Nobody goes to court if nobody gets arrested. Nobody...you know, we don't stop the guy selling drugs in your neighborhood if the police don't have the resources to go over there. Believe it or not, drugs are not the only thing that police departments are expected to
