years. What's the difference? But that's...and they'll get out for another day. But those children who are affected, they're affected from the moment they're molested until the day they die. And that's what we have to look out for. And in our community, there's a lady by the name of Julia Munoz (phonetic) who came up with this magazine. They call it Variety/Variedad. It's been real stories, real issues, and it's in Spanish and English, and what it does, it tells about...it's for kids, just for kids, and it's an educational tool for these children as far as what to look out for. And I think that's something we have to emphasize, is education. Can I mention in...she wanted me to put a little note in here and I said we are attempting, through legislation, to protect our young children from these most despicable of human beings who prey on them and scar their lives forever. However, no matter what we do, they will still be there, so it is of utmost importance that parents, schools, and media educate our young people to be on guard against these pedophiles. And I think that's something we have to do, too. We put them away and, like I say, people say, they...some people say they can be cured; others say they can't. And I'm with the latter myself. I'm not a psychologist or anything, but any time you see them out there and reoffending it's just despicable. You just thank God it's none of your own kin, or, you know, probably what you would possibly do. So I have absolutely no sympathy for those people. So the more stringent, the more penalties we can pile up on them and make it stick, I'm all for that. So with that, I return the rest of my time to the Chair. Thank you.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Engel. Senator Beutler.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Cudaback, members of the Legislature, Senator Bourne, thank you for a tremendous effort on this bill. Obviously, a lot of time has been put in on it. I'd like to go over some of the things that are in the commitment act and that area, and I'm trying to think through in my mind how these procedures fit together with some of the things I observed when I was kind of looking into this stuff a year ago or so, and even more recently. But starting on...just starting first with the section...this is not starting at the beginning, but starting on Section 92, page 100, the part that has to do with continuing
