number. And I'm not...I've been told that that security number is necessary so that the university can get their SAT scores, and that's all it's ever used for.

SENATOR SMITH:      Okay.      What about the other colleges in Nebraska?

SENATOR SCHIMEK:      That, I assume the same, but I don't know that for sure. And I don't know that our colleges or universities ask whether somebody is a legal resident of the United States or not. They're not...that's not their job, but the Social Security number could be a tip-off.

SENATOR SMITH:      But we don't know for sure?

SENATOR SCHIMEK:      What do you mean we don't know for sure?

SENATOR SMITH:      I mean, I sense some hesitance in your response.

SENATOR SCHIMEK:      No, I know that the university does ask for Social Security numbers.

SENATOR SMITH:      So when they can't produce a Social Security number then that would...

SENATOR SCHIMEK:      That could be a trigger so that you would know. Now, I have been told by another source that you don't need those Social Security numbers any longer to get those SAT scores, and I haven't been able to check that out. I'm not quite sure how to check that out. But that's what I was told by the university, that they do ask for the Social Security numbers for that purpose and that purpose only. After they use them for that, then they have no need for that Social Security number any longer.

SENATOR SMITH:      Okay. And this is going to be a question that might take some time to answer, but it concerns me when...I learned over the last couple of years that these parents are here for quite some time illegally. And I'm glad that we have a K-12 system perhaps that is inclusive of these students, and I think that's been left out of the discussion so far, is that our
