April 11, 2006 LB 239

passed out a Kansas case from the federal district court. It's not published as an opinion as, you know, through an appellate court. It essentially said that the court in that case dismissed all counts due to lack of standing, meaning the court said the plaintiffs did not have the correct legal standing to bring their case. And they said that decision making regarding the education of illegal aliens at the postsecondary level is best left to the U.S. Congress and to the Kansas legislature. I think, together with the other federal opinions that I've cited here, that the U.S. Congress decides what type of immigration policy we have in this nation. We have a lot of folks that don't agree with it. I think that's telling. I don't want this bill to be filibustered. I think it deserves an up or down vote, but I do think that this is dangerous ground when you start talking about overruling or sidestepping or crafty legislation to do indirectly what we can't do directly. The law already says 180 days in Nebraska, in Chapter 85, and...180 days, and that's telling right there. I say we sit back, let's see what the federal government does and come at it again when we can make a decision as to where we're going with this after the federal government has weighed in. Thank you, Mr. President.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Thank you, Senator Flood. Senator Aguilar.

SENATOR AGUILAR: Thank you, Mr. President, members. I certainly hope some of what I'm hearing isn't generated by some of the racist hate mail that I've been receiving over the Internet recently. One of the things I appreciated hearing was from Senator Flood. He used the term "undocumented immigrant." I appreciate hearing that because...let me explain that and go into detail a little bit. The people we're talking about here are high school students, 15, 16, and 17 years old. They did absolutely nothing to violate the law knowingly. Yes, they entered the country illegally. They did it, but they had no choice. Their parents brought them here. And it's not likely they're going to hitchhike back across the border because someone is going to refer to them as being illegal. It's just not likely to happen. So I appreciate Senator Flood's comments. "Undocumented immigrant" is a much, much more appropriate title for the youngsters in this situation. Senator Cunningham, I'd
