LB 973 provides that any map introduced as part of a legislative bill or an amendment to a legislative bill for purposes of drawing district boundaries shall be drawn using state-issued computer software. These provisions should not result in any net increase in redistricting costs although there could be the potential for more requests to draw lines. This also assumes that the phrase “state-issued” does not mean that the state is under any obligation to provide outside entities copies of the computer software used in the redistricting process.
