LB 753 updates Nebraska's Protection Orders Act to address military protective orders (MPOs). The bill adds a definition of "military protective order" by reference to federal regulation and authorizes an MPO to be admitted as evidence at a protection-order hearing to support findings related to past conduct and the need for a protection order.

The bill also creates a new duty for peace officers: when arresting a member of the U.S. armed forces, the officer must determine whether an MPO registered in the FBI's National Crime Information Center (NCIC) database exists for the individual, and if there is probable cause of a violation, the officer must notify the issuing military authority.

The Supreme Court states that a minimal fiscal impact is anticipated for judicial education and form revisions, and no additional resources are expected to be required.

There could be an impact to law enforcement agencies. If additional information is received related to any such impact, this fiscal note will be revised.
