LB1181 amends Nebraska's victims' rights framework by relocating and expanding the definition of "victim" in Neb. Rev. Stat. § 81-1848 and updating related statutes to use that definition.

The bill requires prosecuting attorneys to consult with, or make a good-faith effort to consult with, victims before entering plea agreements and to document the consultation or effort. It also updates victim notice and participation provisions for arraignment materials, presentence investigations, appeals, escapes, and post-conviction notifications.

The Crime Commission states that LB 1181 could increase eligibility for counseling claims through the Crime Victim's Reparations Program. The Commission estimates about 10 additional claims per year, up to $5,000 each, for an estimated $50,000 annual increase in expenditures from the Victim Compensation Fund.

The Supreme Court states there is a minimal fiscal impact for judicial education. Any impact on judicial workload cannot be determined at this time. No additional resources are required.

Explanation of Estimate:

LB 1181; Section 6,1,C,iii; page 9. Amends N.R.S. 81-1848, expands the definition of "homicide victim" to include immediate family members, or significant others determined on a case-by-case basis. This expanded definition could potentially result in an increase in the number of victims able to claim compensation for counseling services through the Crime Victim's Reparations Program. Over the past four years there were an average of 11.5 homicide claims paid annually from the fund. LB 1181 would likely result in increased compensation costs. A reasonable estimate of the increased number of "homicide victim" claims would be approximately 10 cases with each case compensated at a maximum of $5,000. This would result in an annual increase of $50,000 to the Victim Compensation Fund. In FY 24-25, CVR expenditures totaled $456,908.73. However, there is a possibility of fiscal impact to the General Fund if the demand for counseling services exceeds projections sustainable under current funding capacity.
