

The majority of states have similar regulations that have been approved by the Environmental Protection Agency.